

A particular trap to catch living D. suzukii has been developed. Adults remain alive because they are not in contact with the lure. This is important for the assessment of presence and the phylogenetic relationship of bacteria within the intestinal tract to distinguish the different populations of D. suzukii

